A 17% saving is the second-best thing in this file. The best thing is an exclusion on their current policy that voids their entire operation.

The game plan

You have a rare thing here: cheaper AND better, with the "better" being something they did not know was missing. Do not open on price. Open on the exclusion, let them read it off their own schedule, and the 17% becomes the thing that makes it easy rather than the thing you are selling.

RUN THE MEETING IN THIS ORDER

- 1 Read them their own business description. "Import of x-ray machines, marketing, installing and repair." Get them to agree that installing and repairing happens at hospitals and practices, not at Friesland Drive.
- 2 Then show them endorsement 001. "No indemnity for work done away from the Insured premises." Let the silence do the work. Do not editorialise.
- 3 Then close it: R221.68 a month. That is what work away plus R5m of products and defective workmanship costs at Bryte — inside a programme that is R8,840 a month cheaper.
- 4 Then the vehicles. Their Hino 300 814 is insured for R599,316 and is worth R783,833. That is R184,517 they carry themselves on a write-off, today, regardless of who they insure with.
- 5 Price last, and honestly. R51,145.80 → R42,305.81. Then tell them the three things that are not yet confirmed, before they ask.

WHY 17% IS EVEN POSSIBLE

R30,000

of claims disclosed on a R613,750-a-year programme. Effectively a clean record. That is the reason Bryte can price this down, and it is worth telling the client — it is their own good housekeeping being rewarded.

▲ BEFORE YOU PRESENT

Do not give a final figure until you have Bryte's motor excess table and the sprinkler position in writing. The quote states no motor excess at all, and Bryte re-surveys a warehouse whose sprinkler requirement the current insurer waived. Either one can move the number.

💰 THE BIGGER SAVING, IF THEY WANT IT

Strip roadside R1,330 and Office Buddy R225, add back their R39.82 motor assistance: saving becomes R10,275.53/mo = R123,306/yr. Bryte's roadside is a commercial-vehicle product and genuinely different — but R15,960 a year is 3% of the programme. Ask them, don't decide for them.

⚠ BRYTE'S MONTHLY COLUMN IS WRONG

The Sasria block divides by ten, not twelve. Quote says R42,868.39/mo; the true figure is R42,305.81. Every other section /12 correctly. Get it reissued. If the client checks the arithmetic and it fails, everything else in your pack is suddenly in question.

💡 THE LINE THAT LANDS

"Your Hino is on the books at five hundred and ninety-nine thousand. It is worth seven hundred and eighty-three. If it burns tomorrow you carry a hundred and eighty-four thousand yourself — and that is true today, on the policy you already have. Fix that whatever you decide about the rest."

🚗 TWO MOTOR REGRESSIONS — OWN THEM FIRST

Passenger and unauthorised passenger liability drop R5,000,000 → R2,500,000 on eight items. Ask Bryte to match R5m and price it. The quote states NO motor excess at all. Current is basic R4,000 (3 items) / R5,000 (3 items), theft 10% min R5,000, windscreen 20% min R350. A 33% saving on higher values has to be explained by something — the excess is the first place a sharp client looks.

📡 CARTRACK IS ALREADY IN

The CIB schedule records Cartrack on 4 of 11 — "CarTrack Installed and Certificate Received CK: 074043", "Fleet Professional #RM199852 — CIB approved", "Fleet Professional CT9", "CT9 #BS128206 — CIB approved". Seven items show no device. Confirm Bryte's tracking requirement by value and quote the balance — you are the incumbent, not a cold call.

The Naked Truth

Six things that can turn this from a win into an argument. Number one can end the deal — raise it with Bryte before you raise the price with the client.

1 ► The sprinkler waiver. This is the deal-breaker.

The CIB fire section records "SURVEY DONE — Stacking Heights exceeds 3m, sprinkler system waived." Bryte is "subject to satisfactory survey". If their surveyor will not waive it on R73.3m of stock stacked over 3m, the client is being asked to sprinkle a warehouse.

DO Send Bryte the existing survey and waiver NOW and get their underwriter to confirm in writing before any figure goes out.

2 ► The quote states no motor excess whatsoever.

Not one figure. Current runs R4,000/R5,000 basic and 10% min R5,000 theft. A 33% motor saving on R404,885 more sum insured is exactly the shape of a quote with a heavier excess behind it.

DO Get the excess table in writing. If it is materially worse, the saving is not what it looks like and you need to know first.

3 ► Passenger liability halves on eight vehicles.

R5,000,000 → R2,500,000, passenger and unauthorised passenger. They also lose a stated R1,000,000 fire/explosion sub-limit — which may actually be a gain, since Bryte does not carve it out at all, but nobody has confirmed that.

SAY "One thing does come down and I would rather show you than have you find it. I have asked them to put it back and price it."

4 ► The liability section is rated on turnover R0 and wages R0.

Printed on the Bryte quote. Liability is rated on both, so R5,576 a year is a placeholder that will be re-rated after inception.

DO Get the real turnover and wage roll to Bryte now. A liability premium rated on a blank is not a premium.

5 ► Roadside is 33 times dearer than what they have.

R1,330/mo against R39.82/mo of motor assistance. Plus Office Buddy at R225 that nobody asked for. Together R15,960 a year — 3% of the programme.

SAY "Two lines in here are new and optional. Take them out and you save R123,000 a year instead of R106,000. Your call, not mine."

6 ► The footer says Hollard on a Bryte-titled quote.

Exactly the same discrepancy as the Hamisa Group quotes. Also: insured VAT and registration number are blank on the Bryte quote — both are on the CIB schedule (VAT 4760147696, reg 1995/001319/07).

DO Confirm in writing who carries the risk, and fill in the VAT and registration yourself before the client sees it.

OPEN

"Your policy describes your business as importing, installing and repairing x-ray machines. Can I ask — when you install one, that happens at the hospital, not at Friesland Drive? Good. Then let me show you one line on page seventeen of your own schedule."

THE OBJECTIONS YOU'LL HIT — AND THE WORDS THAT ANSWER THEM

"Seventeen percent cheaper? What are they cutting?"

- ✓ Fair question, and I checked it line by line. Goods in transit and machinery breakdown price to the same cent. Theft and business all risks are the same items at the same values. On the vehicles they are insuring R404,885 more than you carry today. One thing does come down — passenger liability — and I have asked them to put it back. The other thing I do not yet have is their motor excess table, and I am not giving you a final number until I do.

"We've been with CIB for years and never had a problem."

- ✓ And you have a R30,000 claims record to show for it — that is exactly why this price is available. But you have also never had a claim from a site installation. Endorsement 001 on your liability section says the policy does not respond to work done away from your premises. That is most of what your technicians do.

"What's the catch on the survey?"

- ✓ That is the honest risk and I will not pretend otherwise. Your current insurer surveyed and waived the sprinkler requirement even though stacking is over three metres. Bryte does its own survey. I have sent them your existing survey and waiver and I am asking them to confirm it in writing before you commit to anything.

"Can we just move the vehicles and leave the rest?"

- ✓ You can, but it costs you more. The same eleven vehicles are R12,476 a year dearer bought on their own than inside the programme — two rates change on the Hino and the Crafter. And it would leave R73 million of stock and R75 million of annual carry where they are.

"Three things I am getting in writing before you sign anything: the sprinkler waiver, the motor excesses, and passenger liability back at five million. Give me the go-ahead in principle and I will have all three this week — and either way, please correct your Hino's value on the policy you have now."

THE REFRAME THAT WINS THE ROOM

Every broker who has walked in here has led with a number. You are walking in with a line from page seventeen of their own schedule that nobody has ever read to them. Do that first and the price stops being a negotiation — it becomes the reason it is easy to say yes.
